Journeys in public health: how did my career get to here? Eight public health experts tell about their career pathways

Public health practitioners come from an enormous range of backgrounds, and work in a tremendous variety of roles. This workshop targets anyone considering a future in public health, or curious about what public health work involves or current students of public health – no matter from what their walk of life or what kind of employment or study background.

Come along to hear about the diversity of public health and public health careers and the multiple pathways into careers from a range of guest speakers.

Learn more about the professional support and initiatives provided by the PHAA to assist newcomers to public health, including the early career mentorship program and student awards and scholarships.
